

Where Episcopal Bishops and Delegates Will Live During Great Convention In Richmond

List of Those Who Will Come and Houses Assigned

Elaborate preparations have been made for the coming Episcopal General Convention. Shortly after the Virginia delegation returned from Boston in 1904 with the accepted invitation, a general committee was appointed, with the Rev. William Meade Clarke, rector of St. James' Church, as chairman. The committee has raised a fund of from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars for the expenses of entertaining the delegates. The various items of expense will include a daily lunch at the Masonic Temple, the preparation of the various places of meeting and the expenses of the committees of hospitality. The committee selected as its efficient chairman Mr. E. Herbert Funsten, of the real estate firm of J. B. Elam & Co. The committee was promptly organized, and some six months since opened an office at Eleventh and Bank Streets. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, rector of St. Mark's Church, was employed as secretary, and with an efficient corps of stenographers, has been in charge of the office. The work has been done with the precision and orderliness which shows the long training of the Episcopal service, and ten days before the opening of the convention the list of delegates, with their boards of residence, is practically complete. As soon as some delegations have been entered and the lists finally completed it will be published by the committee in alphabetical form, as a sort of directory of the convention.

While there was at first some disposition on the part of Richmond house-holders to put high prices, the committee, under the leadership of Mr. Funsten and Mr. Darst, took a firm stand, and practically fixed the uniform scale, which is being charged. The general rate for the best class of private residences in desirable locality and with every comfort and convenience is $2 a day for transients, or $10 a week for those staying through the convention, including room and board. Rooms only are uniformly quoted at $1 a day, or $5 a week, and in no cases are more than two in a room.

Mr. Darst reports that with practically all the official delegates located he still has a considerable list of homes for visitors who will apply to his office. The official delegates already located are as follows:
